

the armed forces. The Detroit industrialist will serve in a part-time capacity as a special adviser in coordinating all military activities connected with research in and development and production of guided missiles. He is expected to retain his private job as Chrysler president.

Oct. 26—The National Production Authority imposes a ban on construction of any new buildings intended for "amusement, recreational, or entertainment purposes," effective immediately. The terms of the order are so sweeping that it brings protests from the construction industry, spokesmen for which say that regulations could be made to apply to commercial buildings, homes, and apartment house structures, and that its effect will be to bring the $26,000,000,000 annual building industry to a standstill until the order is clarified.

Oct. 31—Yielding to sharp protests from the construction industry, the National Production Authority modifies its recent building order. Under the original order it warned that it would halt work in progress if defense needs so demanded. It changes the wording of its regulation to the effect that "stop" orders can be issued only before the start of construction. At the same time, Alan Valentine, Administrator of the Economic Stabilization Agency, declares that economic restrictions invoked to meet the Korean emergency may have to remain in force indefinitely because of international uncertainties.

YUGOSLAVIA

Oct. 6—According to revised estimates made by the government, the country has lost about 4,000,000 tons of foodstuffs and animal fodder as a result of the recent drought.

Oct. 7—Patriarch Vikentije, spiritual leader of 6,500,000 Yugoslavs, says in a press interview that Marshal Tito has promised him that all issues between the state and the Serb Orthodox Church will be settled "in goodwill."

Oct. 15—In a move to preserve the morale of the people in cities and towns who are standing in long lines for food, the government publishes a decree wiping out all special privileges in food, housing, and other services enjoyed by high party and government officials.

Oct. 20—Yugoslavia asks the United States for as much as $105,000,000 in critically needed food supplies. The American government assures the Yugoslav Ambassador that favorable action of some sort is in prospect.

Nov. 1—The United States announces that temporary stop-gap aid will be extended to Yugoslavia. The full amount of assistance requested will be sought when Congress reconvenes.
